The Simon Silverman Phenomenology Center at Duquesne University is proud to sponsor its 23rd annual symposium on Friday, March 11 and Saturday, March 12: "Renew the Face of the Earth: Phenomenology and Ecology." An interdisciplinary panel of speakers will strive to answer the question of how the West became so estranged from non-human nature that it condones the ongoing destruction of forests, rivers, valleys, species and ecosystems. Phenomenological thought will be shown to offer a hopeful corrective to this bias. The conference will take place on the Duquesne University campus - 204 Hanley Hall (Law School) and is free and open to the public.
